A Message from the National President

A story is told, probably apocryphal, of a well-known politician for whom everything went wrong in the last twelve months of his career in public service. His party had fallen into the minority, and the initiatives he had worked for all his life had been either defeated or shelved. Finally, he lost the last contest in which he stood for election.

At his last press conference, when asked for his reaction, the politician said, "If anybody ever sees fit to write my biography, I hope they will leave this year out!"

In some respects, I might make the same request, as my last twelve months have been as difficult for me as for our well-known politician. Due to several episodes of ill health, hospitalization and difficult recovery, I have not been able to press forward with certain initiatives which I had hoped to accomplish during my term as your National President. Within the next few months, my term will have been concluded.

Nevertheless, and primarily due to the outstanding efforts of our national officers, Supreme Council members and professional staff, Zeta Beta Tau has prospered during the past twelve months. The work of our volunteers especially, at all levels, has been instrumental during this period of success for the Fraternity.

So I ask that all ZBTs, undergraduates and alumni alike, seek out opportunities to volunteer their participation in support our Brotherhood. Chapter officers, advisors, national committeemen and donors to the ZBT Foundation are all an integral part of what makes ZBT great. Your involvement as you deem it appropriate, is most welcome.

A Strategic Future

Fulfilling a vision doesn't happen by accident. Rather, it takes assessment, brainstorming, and goal-setting for an organization to reach its true potential. Zeta Beta Tau has done just that and is excited to announce the joint strategic plan between the Fraternity and Foundation. While the details are still being finalized we can tell you that there has never been a more exciting time to be part of the Zeta Beta Tau family. The next five years will be a period of rapid growth, increased undergraduate support, and enhanced community relations. We've talked a big talk. . .now it's time to walk our talk.

The Fraternity will be responsible for several aspects of the joint strategic plan for the next five years. These include growth of new chapters, growth within existing chapters, retention of our members into their alumni years, and alumni development. Together, these pieces will assist us in continuing our path toward becoming a true "powerhouse of excellence."

One of the primary reasons many decide to join a fraternity is due to the network that is immediately opened at the time of initiation that can be utilized for life. With more than 140,000 alumni the opportunities are endless to get connected to nearly any walk of life. Because of this it is important that we continue to build the network for our members. ZBT has opened more than 40 new chapters in the last 7 years. Collectively, these groups have added hundreds of additional members to our network. As the years go on and these chapters grow, that number continues to create a valuable impact upon the ZBT experience.

The choice to become a member of a Fraternity should be one of the most important and positive decisions a young man ever makes. The type of experience provided to him by his chapter has the capability to shape him into a leader, an active citizen, and a positive role model for others to look up to. Creating a value-added experience that is in alignment with our mission will draw more quality men to our organization, thus further expanding our network. This should be at the forefront of the ZBT experience. We believe that we must offer a product that will become a part of an individual's life for years to come.

Joining a fraternity creates an opportunity to connect with an organization for a lifetime. In many instances undergraduates feel as though they have gained all the benefits that can be offered before they graduate. This should never be the case. A fraternity is a lifetime commitment and, because of that commitment, there must be something of value offered to our members that they can utilize for their lifetime as a member. A strategic plan wouldn't be complete without a focus on the lifetime experience that a member of ZBT can call upon when he is in need. Without that, we would simply be a four-year organization.

While we can go on for pages and pages breaking down these goals we'd rather you see the results for yourself. As we finalize our plans to achieve our strategic planning goals we assure you that you will begin to see a stronger ZBT today, tomorrow, and for the many years to come. Thank you for being part of the ZBT family. It truly is GREAT to be a ZBT.

Brother Ensign Travels to Haiti with Medical Team

Robert "Bob" G. Ensign, Beta Eta (Bowling Green) '79, a physician assistant in Dayton, Ohio, joined the Disaster Medical Assistance Teams (DMAT) just after 9/11 in order to provide medical aid when mass casualty disasters occur on American soil. DMAT is part of the National Disaster Medical System (NDMS) which falls under the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The Dayton team is among 140 similar "on-call" teams throughout the United States of physicians, physician assistants, nurses, paramedics, lab techs, as well as communicators, electricians, and logistics specialists who serve as first responders to disaster sites across the nation. "We are like a MASH unit," says Bob. "We can operate completely on our own for about three days. We have enough food, water, medical supplies, tents, etc. to go to an area without any resupply to provide care for medical needs up to surgery," he shares.

DMAT personnel are part-time federal employees who are paid during their deployment with NDMS. Their full-time jobs are protected under the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act. Bob works in a gastroenterology practice and in several emergency departments in the Dayton area. As part of the Dayton DMAT team, Bob has been to Florida after Hurricane Frances in 2004, Louisiana following Hurricane Ike in 2008, and the Presidential Inauguration in 2009; they were called just in case something happened. The team's trip to Haiti came just eleven days after the 7.0 earthquake rocked the country in January 2010.

The call came, this time, asking for team members who had passports and immunizations for tropical diseases – the latter of which very few had. Those who did were a shoe-in to go to Haiti. They left January 23rd for Atlanta where Bob and one of the other physicians did physicals on the teams who had just returned from the devastated country.

Arriving in Haiti

On January 24th, the 31-person team landed in Port-au-Prince. They spent the night in tents on the grounds of the U.S. Embassy. The next day they were taken to a 10-acre plot of land, their "home" for the next two weeks, owned by the Israeli Consul to Haiti. Troops from the 82nd Airborne were also stationed there and assigned to security detail for the team.

Under normal circumstances, the DMAT brings large tents and three large trucks with supplies but the tents didn't make the flight to Port-au-Prince so team members slept in small backpacking tents on sleeping pads. Although there was no running water, they felt fortunate to have access to port-o-johns at a nearby soccer field. In addition, the Israeli Defense Force surgical team, who had occupied the compound prior to their arrival, left a make-shift shower they had created out of a 300-gallon drum on top of a wooden frame. These were "luxuries," says Bob, especially since the quake. "We were quite fortunate to have come in behind someone. Some of our team members we met as they were coming back from Atlanta weren't so fortunate. They slept outside on blankets without tents under the open sky, and they had a lot of bug bites and will be at higher risk for tropical diseases," he says.

Medical Treatment and Triage

Just 48 hours after the quake, the Israeli Defense Force surgical team was the first to set up camp at the very same compound to perform acute surgeries, including amputations. As those needs began to lessen, the IDF made way for DMAT to take over in treating minor injuries as well as providing wound care and dressing changes. "This was a multinational effort with teams from around the world. It wasn't just us; we were just a small piece of the pie," Bob says.

Every morning when the team awoke, people would already be at the gate waiting for treatment. DMAT had translators and a triage team at the front of the line to determine who was in true need of medical care versus those who were seeking food or water. However, oftentimes patients would get to the treatment tent complaining of medical ailments that were already present when the earthquake hit.

"We tried our best to give them a little cup of water or any food we had left over from our MREs (military ready-to-eat meals). They loved even the things we didn't particularly like. The problem is, those people walk outside that gate, and where's the next meal going to come from? It was frustrating because you knew you couldn't fix everything," says Bob.

Throughout their two week stay in Haiti, DMAT was able to help many patients by delivering babies, setting broken bones, suturing wounds, and providing medication. However, Bob says he was struck with how desperate the situation is in Haiti. "The malnutrition I saw in the little kids had been there longer than two weeks. Haiti is a third world country to begin with. There were a lot of medical problems before this happened. Some problems we just kind of put a band-aid on," he shares.

Like Living in a War Zone

Unlike U.S.-based disasters, which DMAT members were accustomed to, the team only had the supplies and expertise they'd brought with them. There were no other alternatives. As Bob described it, "This is absolutely the worst situation I've seen, because even in a hurricane where there's no power, no running water, nothing, if someone comes in with a broken leg, you can get on the radio, put the person on an ambulance, and drive 50 miles to put that patient in the hospital. They can have surgery in a nice clean operating room. Where we were working in Haiti, there was no other place. We were it," he says.

The men from the 82nd Airborne compared it to a war zone. "They told us, 'This is kind of like Afghanistan except no one is shooting at you,'" says Bob. "It's dry, hot, people don't speak English, there's destruction, there's dust everywhere and disease. They told us it's just like being in a war situation."

Smiles Amidst the Rubble

Despite their circumstances, Bob calls the Haitian people "fantastic." He says, "Everyone smiled when you smiled at them. Through the translators they always thanked us for being there. The children were wonderful. They would come up and give you a thumbs up. They wanted to do the fist-bump, and some wanted to hold your hand. They all smiled. They were living in probably the worst conditions you could imagine, yet they smiled," he says. The adults were also very thankful. "They told us not to listen to the news stories that said Americans shouldn't be there. They said they knew we were there to help," he says.

Most of the people they met seemed to be tolerating the situation quite well. "It's interesting to drive down the street and see the disaster but to then talk to the people and see how they are reacting to it. They haven't had running water or bathroom facilities for two weeks and they still smile. I think they are so used to living under such terrible conditions that this was just one more thing they have to bear and they do the best they can," he says.

The experience really brought to light for Bob how people live in other countries. "You realize how good we have it living in the U.S. It also made me realize how the human spirit can overcome the worst things in life. Kids who hadn't had a meal for two weeks would make a kite out of garbage and smile and play in the street. The human spirit is so resilient when it needs to be," he says.

How You Can Help

Even today, Bob says the best thing you can do for Haiti is donate money or supplies to a reputable organization like the Red Cross or another well-known relief organization. For those who wish to go in person, he says it's extremely important to affiliate with a group that has the means to get you there AND back. His team saw several groups at the airport who flew into the Dominican Republic but had no way to get out of Haiti or back to the United States.

Even medical teams that may have come prepared ran into trouble. They encountered one group from the U.S. that had trouble and had to treat their head nurse who was suffering from heat stroke. "When you go, you have to have support services available: security, food, water, tents, supplies, and a means of getting back out of the country. There are so many details you have to have planned out ahead of time. Just showing up doesn't always make sense. It can cause more problems and put you at risk, too. You don't want to become one of the victims," he says.

Small city Jews find conviction and inspiration in their upbringing

By Kiera Wiatrak (this article originally appeared in The Wisconsin Jewish Chronicle)

Madison — Last winter, then UW-Madison junior Karsyn Durkin returned to her hometown of Waupaca to find a nasty surprise in the local newspaper. A woman had written a letter-to-the-editor complaining that the kids were singing too many Jewish songs in the elementary school Christmas pageant.

"When they did sing the Jewish songs, as a little kid I was like, 'Hey, finally a song for me,'" Durkin recalled. "And seeing my friends singing it too, it was cool." Durkin was one of the only Jews in her Wisconsin hometown.

"Here we are living in the community for over 16 years," she said. "Both my sisters were valedictorians. We're a Jewish family that produced very well-liked kids who gave back a lot to the community, and we were kind of being attacked."

Small town Jews share a common experience fueled by a sense of isolation that is unknown to Jews raised in large Jewish communities in cities such as New York, Chicago, Detroit and yes, Milwaukee.

Durkin comes from an interfaith marriage with a Jewish mother and Catholic-raised father. Though she has never been to synagogue — her mom worked weekends and the nearest synagogue was nearly an hour away in Appleton — Judaism played a critical role in her upbringing. Her mom would come to school to teach the other kids about Chanukah and homemade matzah ball soup is one of her favorite foods.

But a lot of her memories of being Jewish are polluted by the awkwardness of standing out. "I was like the outsider in that way, and that was hurtful because I didn't feel like I was any different than anyone else," Durkin says.

For a lot of small-city Jews, their minority status doesn't disappear when they join larger Jewish communities, like the Jewish population on the UW-Madison campus.

While Jews raised in large Jewish communities often stick together once they get to college, Jews from smaller Wisconsin cities, once a minority in their hometowns, are now a minority among the big-city Jews.

University of Wisconsin-Madison senior Ben Borsuk has sometimes felt more like an anomaly on campus than he did growing up in Oshkosh, he said.

"I don't reflect a normal Jewish kid that goes to Madison," he said, explaining that most Jews on campus are from big cities. "Fitting in with those Jewish kids is probably more difficult than trying to hang out with a bunch of non-Jews."

"Am I Jewish enough?"

This divide between big city and small city Jews is nothing new. Madison Area Technical College history instructor and humanities department chair Jonathan Pollack says this tension on college campuses first appeared in the 1920s and 1930s, when Jews began enrolling in universities en masse.

In his article, "Jewish Problems: Eastern and Western Jewish Identities in Conflict at the University of Wisconsin, 1919-1941," he points out that Jews from big cities all over the country began flocking to UW-Madison because it was one of the only universities at the time that didn't have a Jewish student quota.

"Under pressure of anti-Semitism from outside the community, friendly jokes and stereotypes about manners, accents, and attitude acquired a sharper edge that has characterized regional differences among American Jews on college campuses to the present day," he writes.

Often, this leads to a hesitancy to take advantage of opportunities not available in smaller communities because of a sense of not belonging here either.

"Now that I'm here, I feel kind of self-conscious around other Jewish people because, it's like, 'Am I Jewish enough?'" Durkin said.

But according to Pollack, that tentativeness is often overpowered by a thirst for opportunities not available in their hometowns. "I think that oftentimes Jewish students from small towns will really want to prioritize a college experience that will have a big Jewish context," he said.

"They'll seek out Hillel activities, they'll try to get involved in Jewish fraternities and sororities.... That's like a really big draw, that finally they can be around other Jewish people and they don't have to be explaining themselves all the damn time."

Borsuk joined a Jewish fraternity, Zeta Beta Tau, when he got to college to experience firsthand what he was only able to imagine his entire childhood.

"I learned things, but it was textbook material and it was somewhat common knowledge, but I learned the answers and the depth of Judaism when I got to college," he said.

"Intense responsibility"

Despite the camaraderie small city Jews find on campus, they're still thankful for the unique sense of identity they acquired as one of the only Jews in their hometowns.

UW Hillel Religious Life intern Simon Dick, who went to high school in Green Bay, says he's grateful for his small community upbringing because he feels it forced him to find his own reasons for being Jewish.

"Perhaps I missed out on the educational opportunities a larger community can provide," he said, "but at the same time, my reasons for being Jewish, I feel, are stronger [because of] my connection with the past and my need to keep the traditions going," said Dick, whose mother is the rabbi at Green Bay's Congregation Cnesses Israel.

Borsuk meets with a rabbi weekly to learn more about the spiritual aspects of Judaism. He believes that his curiosity is a direct result of his small city upbringing. If he'd grown up in a large community, he said, "I wouldn't be as curious about it or as involved in it because I'd be so used to it."

But in smaller cities, non-Jewish peers also tend to be curious about the Jewish religion.

"You wind up becoming kind of an expert on Judaism and Jewish history and things like that, even if you're not especially interested in it because people always ask you questions," Pollack said.

In fact, when classmates and friends are constantly approaching the only Jew they know with their questions, small city Jews often feel they are the only ones around to answer these questions, and therefore responsible for representing the entire Jewish population.

"It's a pretty intense responsibility," Dick said.

However, some smaller Jewish communities are just big enough to form a tight-knit, intimate setting that can infuse an even stronger sense of Judaism and identity into the community.

"I think growing up in a smaller community gave me positive experiences with a synagogue, and helped me recognize the hard work that enabled my Jewish education," said UW-Madison junior and La Crosse native Levi Prombaum in an e-mail interview.

"The smallness also means that there is little room for apathy or dormancy; the proportion of active, committed% families is consistently inspiring," said Prombaum, whose father is the rabbi at La Crosse's Congregation Sons of Abraham.

Prombaum's friend and UW-Madison peer Hannah Blanke looks back fondly on community life at the synagogue.

"This personal attention made me feel like I wasn't just a number, and since I have lived in La Crosse my whole life, the whole congregation has watched me grow and prepare, so that when I had my bat mitzvah, it wasn't like there were tons of strange faces, since I had seen most of these people weekly (at least) for years," she said in an e-mail interview.

Growing up in a smaller Jewish community, said UW Hillel campus Rabbi Andrea Steinberger, "allows a person to understand that a community takes a lot of individuals who are able to contribute in different ways, and that a person doesn't have the luxury of sitting back and just watching and waiting for someone else to do it."

She says it is these people who often emerge as Jewish leaders on campus, and seek out Jewish professions when they graduate.

"I can think of a dozen students who come from throughout Wisconsin who came to many, many things at Hillel just because they were happening," she said. "They just said, 'If this is what's happening, I want to be a part of it.'"

Regardless of the connections Wisconsin Jews make when they leave their small cities and join the UW Jewish campus community, they never forget where they came from.

After Durkin read the letter-to-the-editor in her Waupaca paper, she decided to fight back. While being the only Jew wasn't easy growing up, she knew that her community had more integrity than the article suggested.

She wrote a letter in response, which was published a few days later and the reaction was overwhelmingly positive.

"I had people I had not talked to in a long time come up to me and say, your article was really good, your letter was really nice," she said. "Living there didn't mean people weren't open."

Kiera Wiatrak is a former Chronicle intern and a communications specialist at University Communications at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Children's Miracle Network

Children's Miracle Network is a non-profit organization that raises funds for more than 170 children's hospitals. Donations to Children's Miracle Network create miracles by funding medical care, research and education that saves and improves the lives of 17 million children each year.

Zeta Beta Tau adopted Children's Miracle Network as a national philanthropy in 2002 based on Children's Miracle Network's founding commitments. First, partnering with Children's Miracle Network provides ZBT chapters the ability to support an organization that is national in scope and also provides a way to work with the local community. Every dollar raised is disbursed directly to the local Children's Miracle Network hospital. Second, partnering with Children's Miracle Network provides an opportunity to help all causes. Children's Hospitals treat everything from asthma and cystic fibrosis to cancer, heart defects, pediatric AIDS, muscular dystrophy, juvenile diabetes, serious injuries and more.

Zeta Beta Tau chapters make a difference by raising the needed monies to help fund these vital services through Get on the Ball, Dance Marathons and other fundraisers throughout the year. Through your support, every dollar raised literally helps mend broken bones, cure cancer, repair hearts, and more importantly give hope to the families and children who visit the hospital each day. Zeta Beta Tau brothers truly make miracles happen in their community.

Meet Milca Gutierrez, an example of a real miracle you have helped provide. Eleven-year-old Milca Gutierrez of Fresno, Calif., has been seen at Children's Hospital Central California more than 180 times and has undergone over 10 operations, yet she seeks no sympathy.

At 4 months of age Milca was diagnosed with a rare disorder called osteogenesis imperfecta, more commonly known as brittle bone disease. This rare disorder affects the connective tissue and causes bones to break easily without any apparent reason.

A constant source of optimism and encouragement, whether to herself or others, Milca has a special knack for helping those around her. In fact, every year her family travels to their native hometown in Mexico to provide clothes, toys and stuffed animals to families in need.

Thanks to the cutting-edge medical care provided throughout her life, Milca is able to live an active life. Her favorite activities include swimming and math, and she dreams of becoming a doctor and helping others.

Milca may continue to be treated for fractures the rest of her life, but her positive spirit will never break. After all, "it's just a bone," she says.

Thank you, brothers of Zeta Beta Tau for your support!

Jewish Rush in the Bible Belt

It was early December in Tucson, Ariz.—45 years and 1,600 miles from our undergraduate days at Vanderbilt.

We came together, this graying group of sexagenarians, to recharge our connections to each other and to celebrate four decades of friendship.

Not everyone was present in Tucson that weekend; regrettably, some had passed away. Their absence underscored our own finite existence. Indeed, the inevitable tug of mortality was a magnet that pulled us together again.

We graduated in '64, '65 and '66. We were physicians, attorneys, professors and assorted business types. Many had retired to savor the joys of grandparenting plus a heavy dose of travel.

We were not so different from any other Vandy fraternity group of the 1960s. Except for one thing: We were all Jewish.

The memories flowed endlessly for nearly four days. We reveled in old war stories—of parties, professors, football games and spring breaks. We shared updates on our lives—health, careers, children, grandchildren.

What we did not talk about was the unique position of Zeta Beta Tau, a Jewish fraternity within a largely Protestant undergraduate population. And the fact that fraternity rush prior to the late 1960s included a mandatory separate system called "Jewish Rush."

Vanderbilt undergrads in 1964 were white, Christian and majority Greek. Our fraternity members were predominantly Southerners, comfortable with—or at least acclimated to—the mainstream religious traditions of the region.

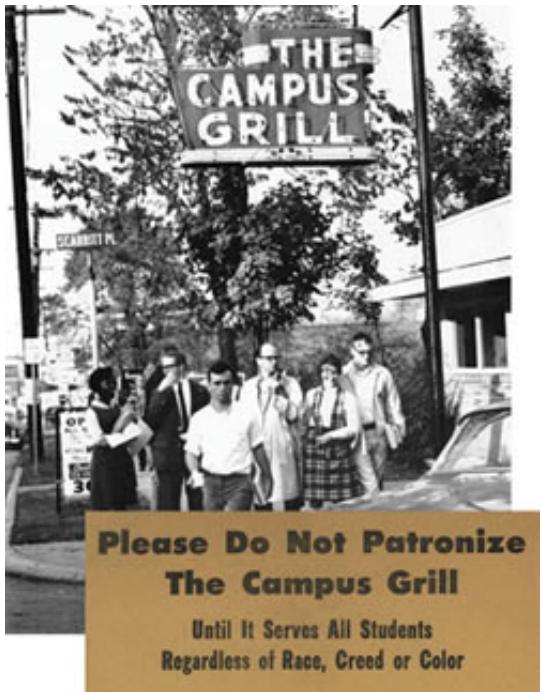

Growing up Jewish in the Old South was a complex cultural experience. There were daily public school prayers and church-based school events. We attended Christmas parties and Easter parades and shared family occasions with non-Jewish friends.

We were aware in high school of Jewish fraternities and Gentile fraternities at Vanderbilt and most other universities of the era. This distinction was not at all offensive to us; in retrospect, though, one might question the sociology of separation.

Nonetheless, we were always Jewish, individually and collectively. We were the largest Jewish presence on the campus, different in some basic ways from the rest of the student body.

I remember a spring day in 1964. The chapter had a new home at 2419 Kensington Place. Rabbi Jerome Kestenbaum, DDiv'70, of West End Synagogue blessed the new building and affixed a large mezuzah to the upper right doorpost of the house. (A mezuzah is a piece of parchment in a decorative case placed on doors of Jewish homes.) Few of us were particularly religious in those days, but we were Jewish and this was our tradition.

There were other traditions, perhaps less overt but equally compelling. The Civil Rights Movement of the early '60s revealed in us an almost genetic compulsion for human rights.

There was the episode involving The Campus Grill, on 21st Avenue South at Scarritt Place, just across the street from the library. The owner of the popular hangout refused to serve two black graduate students. "It's just the way I run my business," stated the proprietor, quoted in The Vanderbilt Hustler, Nov. 1, 1963.

"We're not trying to hurt your business," one of the students said. "We just want something to eat."

Ironically, ZBT thrived under the old system. We were separate but perhaps even a little more than equal. Because we did not compete for pledges with a dozen mainstream fraternities, we were free to form multiple alliances across the campus—political, social, academic and personal. ZBT's campus leaders enjoyed a unique neutrality.

"The ZBTs excelled in every way, and there were deep friendships between Jewish and non-Jewish students which endure to this day," remembers Joe Martin, BA'64, president of the Interfraternity Council for 1963–64. "But when it came to rush, the Jewish students went one way, and everyone else went another. No one seemed to give it a second thought at the time." (Martin, of Atlanta, also was president of the Vanderbilt Alumni Association in 1977–78.)

The years 1964 and 1965 were a triumphant time for ZBT. The Vanderbilt chapter was twice named best in the nation by the fraternity's national leadership. Through 1967 the chapter was the perpetual winner—eight consecutive semesters—of the Vanderbilt Interfraternity Council's Scholarship Trophy, and individual members held major leadership positions in writer for the Hustler urged a boycott of the establishment. Picket lines were set up, and student volunteers from Vanderbilt and Fisk maintained a vigil outside the restaurant. Several weeks later The Campus Grill was open for everyone.

The annual IMPACT Symposium brought major national figures to campus. Featured speakers in 1965 were George Wallace, the first-term (then-segregationist) governor of Alabama, and Roy Wilkins, executive director of the NAACP. Wallace had been invited to lunch by one of the other fraternities, and ZBT voted to invite Roy Wilkins for an informal "lunch and learn."

Roy Wilkins was a thoughtful, articulate man who exuded calm and confidence. I'll never forget his reply to what appeared to be an academic question posed by a perky Vanderbilt cheerleader: "But Mr. Wilkins," she asked, "wouldn't intermarriage ultimately help your movement?"

Wilkins responded with eloquent wisdom. "Young lady," he said, "I would never advocate marriage for a cause, no matter how just."

Cohen and Rodger (Buddy) Cooper, BA'61, of St. Louis are part of a network of late 1950s/early 1960s ZBTs who have remained steadfastly connected, even more so in recent years with the help of the Internet. Cooper says, "I was the only Jewish football player on the freshman team. I knew I wouldn't be rushed by the mainstream fraternities, but my experience at Vanderbilt was wonderful, and I had many pals across the campus through intramural sports."

The 1919 ZBT class included Dan May (pictured center, far left), who was one of the fraternity's founders and later served on the Vanderbilt Board of Trust for 31 years. (courtesy of vanderbilt university special collections and university archives)

Why did ZBT host Wilkins that day?

Perhaps it was because we understood—innately—the challenges of the outsider.

We, ourselves, were outsiders seeking acceptance by the majority. And to a large extent, we succeeded; Vanderbilt in the 1960s was a remarkably nurturing environment, both academically and socially.

Oh, there were occasional slights when a co-ed's parents disapproved of their daughter's ZBT date for a sorority ball at the country club. We came to understand that such preferences were institutional and likely generational.

The ZBT Class of 1959 will become Quinqs this year at the university's Reunion Oct. 16-17. "Almost the entire class will be there," notes '58-'59 Chapter President

Another rising Quin, Bob Royal of Memphis, came to Vanderbilt from Red Bay, Ala., where his was the only Jewish family in town. He recalls the onset of rush in 1955. "All freshman men went to Memorial Gym to learn about rush procedures. At the end of the talk, the 50 or so Jewish freshmen were asked to stay," says Royal, BA'59, JD'62. "I'll never forget my reaction to seeing 50 Jewish boys all in one place—and the very different reaction of a freshman from New York City. I exclaimed, 'Wow, 50 Jews!' and he said, 'Whoa ... only 50 Jews?' I pledged ZBT. He joined Alpha Epsilon Pi [the other Jewish fraternity on campus]."

Since 1963 this building on Kensington Place has housed the Vanderbilt ZBT chapter.

There was also a Jewish sorority, Alpha Epsilon Phi, which had opened a chapter at Vanderbilt in 1925; entertainer Dinah Shore, BA'38, was president of the chapter during her senior year. The sorority no longer has a chapter at Vanderbilt, but Zeta Beta Tau, now a nonsectarian fraternity, is still going strong on campus. Alpha Epsilon Pi continues to pledge mostly Jewish members.

Ultimately, having a separate rush system was troubling to both Jews and non-Jews. "It wasn't right," says former Interfraternity Council President Joe Martin, who was a member of Phi Delta Theta.

New York attorney Steve Gross, BA'60, describes the concept of "Jewish Rush" as "not very flattering." He adds, "By the time my son got to Vanderbilt, Jewish rush was no more, and the old rumor of a 'Jewish quota' seemed to have gone away."

Chapter President Alan Elsas, BA'62, of Atlanta is essentially in agreement with Gross. "I felt as a freshman there was an unnecessary separation. My Atlanta friends were joining other fraternities and jokingly offered to make me an 'honorary member.' But I joined ZBT and had a terrific four years at Vanderbilt."

Former ZBT President Dr. Ralph Lampert, BA'61, of Williamsburg, Va., came to Vanderbilt from the piney woods of rural Louisiana. "For the first time in my life," Lampert says, "I was a participant in a small Jewish community—the ZBT fraternity. It was an eye-opening experience to associate with this eclectic group. You could find the urbane, the witty, the sophisticate, the athlete, the brain, even the religious zealot—all in a Jewish context. And 50 years later, I highly value those friendships."

"After graduation I slipped back into a secular mode," Lampert continues. "My cultural heritage is to be found more in William Faulkner than Saul Bellow. My religious philosophy is better explained by Richard Dawkins or Christopher Hitchens. But despite my lapse from tradition, I believe those four years at Vanderbilt and ZBT were the most valuable and transformational of my life. I did not consider the separation demeaning, nor did my Christian friends. We were not victims."

Members of Zeta Beta Tau from the Classes of 1964, 1965 and 1966 gathered in Tucson, Ariz., last December for a reunion.

Since 1963 this building on Kensington Place has housed the Vanderbilt ZBT chapter.

LEARN FROM CLEVELAND

I had the privilege of attending ZBT's National Conference and Leadership School this past summer in Cleveland, Ohio. Though I was certainly excited about seeing the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame, the prospect of traveling to Cleveland in the summer did not excite me.

Not only was I pleasantly surprised by the beauty and liveliness of the downtown, I realized that Cleveland does at least one thing better than any city in America, and that is philanthropy.

Year in and year out, the Cleveland Jewish community gives more to the Jewish Community Federation than any other city in America. They have both the highest percentage of givers and the highest per capita giving average. Occasionally, other cities challenge Cleveland in these areas, but consistently, Cleveland ranks one or two in both.

This is exactly the kind of modeling we should be doing as a fraternity, and, in many cases, we are. One of my best memories as a ZBT at Northwestern University was standing out on street corners with orange vests "canning" for charity as part of Northwestern's Dance Marathon. We raised over $15,000 back in 1988. Today, the Gamma Chapter routinely raises over $100,000! Other chapters are doing similar good work. This dedication by our students to help others in need is astounding.

So while Cleveland may be denigrated occasionally in a joke or known primarily these days for the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame or LeBron James, what it should be known and admired for is their true spirit of giving to others.

Cordially, Fraternally & Sincerely,

Rabbi Mark Bloom

Regional Conclaves & James E. Greer, Jr. Presidents' Leadership Academy

"To furnish the means of acquiring knowledge is...the greatest benefit that can be conferred upon mankind. It prolongs life itself and enlarges the sphere of existence."

- John Quincy Adams

This winter season has been a great time of learning in ZBT. The Fraternity conducted two successful undergraduate training programs in January and February: the James E. Greer, Jr. Presidents' Leadership Academy and five Regional Conclaves. Both brought together undergraduate and alumni Brothers to learn and grow, thus extending the life of our Fraternity through the sharing of knowledge.

A record number of undergraduate Brothers attended the 2010 James E. Greer, Jr. Presidents' Leadership Academy in January. Twenty-two undergraduate Presidents gathered to discuss their leadership styles and how those styles impact the success of our Chapters and Colonies. Each attending President was challenged to define success and create a plan for achieving success for his Chapter or Colony.

The James E. Greer, Jr. Presidents' Leadership Academy is successful because undergraduate Presidents attend voluntarily, thus creating an open learning environment where Brothers are eager to share their thoughts and experiences. The Zeta Beta Tau Foundation plays a crucial role in the program's success because the Foundation completely underwrites the costs of hosting the Academy. Alumni Brothers recognize the value of the program, and the positive impact it has on our Chapters and Colonies, and have given to the Zeta Beta Tau Foundation specifically to support the Academy.

James "Jim" E. Greer, Jr., Beta Pi (California State University – Long Beach) '64, ZBT's Executive Vice President Emeritus, served as the keynote speaker. He was joined in facilitating the Academy's program by:

National Vice President Ronald A. Pardo, Alpha Omicron (Arizona) '88,

Foundation Annual Fund Director Todd A. Gagliano, Beta Alpha Chi (York) '95,

Director of Alumni and Parent Relations Nathan D. Fox, Beta Alpha Theta (Colorado) '09

Foundation Executive Director Faron A. Lewitt, Psi (Alabama) '97 and Fraternity Executive Director Laurence A. Bolotin, Alpha Zeta (Florida, '01).

The James E. Greer, Jr. President's Academy's success is demonstrated through the feedback we received from attendees.

"It is an incredible learning experience." – Edmund Bethke, Gamma Lambda Colony at the University of Hartford

"This program is like a 'fix all' for most...problems in my organization." – Eason Smith, Beta Pi Chapter at CS-Long Beach

"I got to know the National organization on a more personal level. I feel more connected." – Joey Shea, Eta Delta Chapter at UNLV

"Meeting so many other Presidents from Chapters from around the country...was a unique experience that I'm glad I didn't miss." – Andrew Dickler, Beta Delta Chapter at Rutgers University

ZBT hosted five Regional Conclave training programs across the country in January and February. Regional Conclaves were attended by 300 undergraduate Brothers, reaching ten percent of our undergraduate population through this program. The curriculum focused on applying the values stated in our Ritual, Credo and Mission Statement to daily undergraduate life. The Conclaves began with the ZBT Initiation Ritual, setting the stage for discussing ZBT's values. Participants created goals for, and engaged in strategic planning for their Chapters and Colonies utilizing the values of ZBT as bases for these exercises. Each Conclave concluded with a meaningful opportunity for every attendee to share how the Fraternity's Ritual, Credo and Mission Statement has impacted his life.

The Fraternity is thankful to the Zeta Beta Tau Foundation, which proudly sponsors a portion of the Regional Conclave program. We also thank the many alumni, staff, and friends of the Fraternity who facilitated at Regional Conclaves.

The Regional Conclave program is a valuable learning experience for our undergraduate Brothers. Following are just a few of the comments we received.

our Chapters and Colonies."

"I really enjoyed the Ritual at the opening of the Conclave. It really set the tone for the weekend, and was a great way to connect us all back to the tenets of ZBT as we talked about

"You gain such a vast knowledge of how a successful fraternity works."

"I recommend this [program] because it helps us to realize what being a Brother is all about."

"We now have specific goals we want to achieve and learned many new ideas from other Chapters."

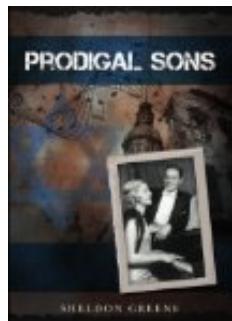

"The Ritual discussion was valuable to me personally. It helped me to reiterate the set of values I've learned."

"I really loved and appreciated the emphasis on the Ritual. It brought it to a whole new level for me."

One of ZBT's core values is acquiring and sharing knowledge along our journey to becoming successful Brothers. Our undergraduate members who participated in the James E. Greer, Jr. Presidents' Leadership Academy and Regional Conclaves, and their Chapters and Colonies, have taken a great step in bringing our values to life. These programs help us to reach the goals espoused by our Founders through our Ritual and strengthen our Brotherhood. As we heard from around the country, during each Conclave session and in the James E. Greer, Jr. Presidents' Leadership Academy, it's great to be a ZBT.

Munich, 1950, occupied West Germany; Horst Vogle is quietly working to reassemble the city museum's art collection. Aspiring pianist, Greta Furster, introduces him to a group of ambitious war veterans seeking to restore German pride and help refugees fleeing the Communist East. Vogle learns that they are using Nazi gold to fund Egyptian weapons intended to be used against Israel.

Vogle has his own secret. He is Jan Goldberg, one-time Jewish Partisan and soldier in the Israeli War of Independence, now an Israeli assassin, targeting Nazi fugitives. To Goldberg, recovering gold taken from Jewish victims is a way of gaining retribution for the Holocaust and as his bond to Greta intensifies, his mission and identity are tested. This fact-based thriller is a must-read for fans of John Le Carré and Alan Furst. It's an intriguing take on the Nazi legacy in Post War Germany and an exploration of the polarities of revenge and reconciliation, the limitations of ideology, and the power of love.

Merle H. Horwitz, Alpha Delta, (Southern California) '50

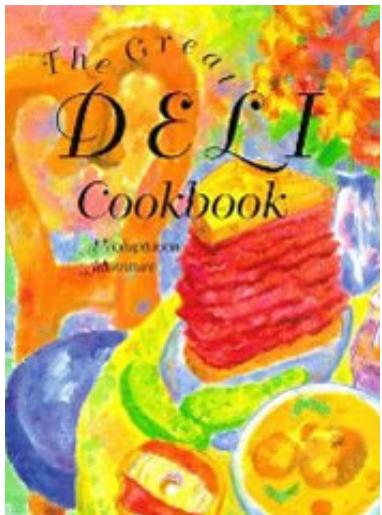

Merle H. Horwitz grew up in Pasadena, California. He attended Pasadena City College and graduated from USC in the 1950s. Thereafter he attended Hastings College of Law in San Francisco and UCLA. Horwitz's lengthy legal career and trial work representing at times various celebrities in domestic cases was the inspiration for this book. It is set in a Los Angeles courtroom with its Hollywood glitz and street characters. You might recognize the era of Janis Joplin. Horwitz was a member of the California Bar, the Beverly Hills Bar and the Century City Bar. He also tried cases in a half dozen other states and wrote several Harvey Ace books. When that all got boring he wrote The Great Deli Cookbook. It was a great success. In 1980, Horwitz wrote Love is Love... But Business is Business and was among the first in the legal profession to propose that rights arise when people live together depending on individual facts; he revised and republished it in 2008, the same year he coauthored Defeat Foreclosure with California Realtor William Dorich. Horwitz is currently writing a new Harvey Ace novel.

Saul, proprietor of Junior's Deli in Los Angeles, CA, is everything – every secret, every ingredient, every ounce of loving tenderness which goes into the creation of one of the world's most beloved food categories. The deli is an American Gastronomic Institution enjoyed by the melting pot of ethnicities found here. The Great Deli Cookbook is published in a hardcover format by Bedford Books.

Everything you'd find on your favorite deli menu is found in The Great Deli Cookbook from the vaguely familiar but exotic sounding – stuffed cabbage kreplach, noodle kugel, potato knish, beet borscht, rice pudding, cheese blintzes, chopped liver, matzo balls, reuben sandwich, corned beef and cabbage and pastrami to the more exotic – potato pirogen, kasha varnishkas, tzimmis to the commonplace – macaroni and cheese, potato salad, chicken soup, meat loaf, and bread pudding.

Presented with glorious full-color original artwork, each recipe is wrapped around warm and wonderful vignettes of the lore and healing properties of the "chicken soup" metier.

The Great Deli Cookbook brings to life the history and lore of traditional deli fare. With a pinch of black pepper, a smidgen of vinegar, and a bit of allspice, one can become a great deli cook at home.

Love is Love But... Business is Business

Merle H. Horwitz, Alpha Delta, (Southern California) '50

Book plus Cohabitation contract on CD Love is Love but... Business is Business was written for those who can't get married as well as those who won't... and it was written for those who are unsure and waiting for personal certainty or until marriage becomes their desired choice. As values and behavior change in our society, young adults place far less value or moral stigma on out-of-wedlock births than do their elder generation. Four out of ten (36.8%) births in the United States are to an unmarried woman. Therefore, nearly half (47%) of adults under 40 have spent a portion of their lives in a cohabiting relationship. About half of all non-marital births are to cohabitating couples, compared to 15 years ago when it was about a third. Many are unable to marry or establish ordinary civil rights. Many say they aren't sure. The book includes the Cohabitation Contract on CD disk which allows the user to customize the agreement. The forms can be completed without a lawyer and they are applicable in all states. The book and contract are easy to understand and covers what you need to do with: real estate, jewelry and gifts to each other, furniture, leases, bank accounts, investments, season tickets, illness, property rights and liabilities, raising children and most important, how to split up. The book also covers same sex unions as well as divorce and cohabitation and what arrangements should be considered with social security and retirement benefits in a cohabitation arrangement. Also covered are how to protect assets and heirs. If marriage is not your choice, then Love is Love is a must.

The Israel on Campus Coalition (ICC)

The Israel on Campus Coalition (ICC) is a partnership of the Charles and Lynn Schusterman Family Foundation and Hillel: The Foundation for Jewish Campus Life, in cooperation with a network of national organizations (including Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity) committed to promoting Israel education and advocacy on campus. The ICC's 34 member organizations are dedicated to working collaboratively to assist students in fostering support for Israel on the college campus.

The Israel on Campus Coalition was formed during a consultation convened by the Schusterman Family Foundation in March 2002 to evaluate the worrisome rise in anti-Israel activities on college campuses across North America. Jewish community professionals in attendance concluded there was an essential and immediate need for:

- Increased strategic cooperation and collaboration among community organizations from across the political spectrum
- Improved sharing of information, ideas and resources to minimize duplicative efforts
- A shift to pro-active advocacy and educational initiatives to better support Israel on campus

The ICC was given a home at the Schusterman International Center in Washington, D.C. and officially launched in July 2002 with a consultation including an even broader number of concerned professionals from the Jewish community. Since then, the ICC has helped organize the Jewish community to work together – and focus on – a pro-active, pro-Israel agenda on campus.

Today, the ICC serves as the central coordinating and strategic body to address campus issues and intelligently impact a pro-active, pro-Israel agenda on campus. The Jewish community relies on the ICC and its members to meet the needs of the pro-Israel community on campus, identify the important issues and initiatives, and work cooperatively with key partners and community organizations.

Phi Alpha at GWU – Twice from the Ashes

The new effort to resurrect the fraternity comes in an era different from that of the 1950's
by Burton H. (Buddy) Wolfe, Phi Alpha (GWU)
'54

It was September 1950. Harold Mesirow and I, graduates from Woodrow Wilson High School in Washington, D.C., had enrolled at George Washington University and were now making the rounds from fraternity to fraternity to determine which we would choose to pledge. We were honest in talking to the predominantly gentile fraternity officers, informing them that we were strongly leaning to a choice between Tau Epsilon Phi (TEP) and Phi Alpha. "Oh, but those are Jewish fraternities," one of the officers of the biggest of all fraternities on campus told us. "Is that so?" I responded. "Well, thanks for telling us about that."

TEP was the bigger, more prosperous of the two "Jewish fraternities" (not entirely Jewish). They had a luxurious fraternity house and plenty of money to put on feasts and take prospects on excursions and to GWU football games out of town. Phi Alpha was running out of money, had lost its nice fraternity house on Connecticut Avenue, and was about to move into a small, dumpy, ugly old Victorian row house. The only advantage of it was that it was close to all GWU buildings.

Had Harold and I opted for TEP, Phi Alpha would have been dead, because all of the other young Jews entering GWU – several dozen of them - pledged TEP, and our doing so would have left Phi Alpha with nothing and on its way to oblivion. But Harold and I chose to pledge Phi Alpha because we liked the brothers far more than those of TEP, and we decided to bring the fraternity back to life. In one year we would turn the situation around.

Today, after Phi Alpha died eventually anyway, there is a movement led by Andrew Klein to resurrect the Phi Alpha branch of ZBT at GWU, and it appears to be going well, in an era different from that of 1950.

A little bit of prejudice against Jews

As indicated by the comment from the officer of the predominantly gentile fraternity that I

Bob ("Goldie") Goldstein, now a physical education instructor; Joe Kullback, now a consultant; Harold Mesirow, now an admiralty lawyer; Sylvan Goldin, now a Doctor of Osteopathy; Len Weinglass, now a famous civil rights lawyer; Dan ("Abe") Leviton, present occupation unknown; Marvin ("Sunny Jim") Rosenblatt, now a Washington DC physician.

Bo Dorish, present occupation unknown; Arthur Kirsch, younger brother of Bo Kirsch and now a practicing psychologist; Don Wilensky; George Liss, now a Ophthalmologist in the Boca Raton, Florida; and Burton ("Buddy") Wolfe.

mentioned, there was a bit of prejudice against Jews in those days. It was minor, not openly rampant, at GWU, where a Jewess already had been "Cherry Blossom Queen" and Jews were in prominent positions on campus. For example, the only periodical at GWU in those days was The Hatchet, and the editorial board running it consisted almost entirely of Jews. Two of them were Phi Alphans: Ralph Feller was the managing editor and I was the sports editor. Also, even then there were crossovers. A few Jews were members of the predominantly gentile fraternities; and at Phi Alpha we saw to it that if any gentile wanted to join us, he was welcomed. It was part of the resurrection.

The 1950's resurrection

It happened in part because Harold Mesirow and I were influential in certain ways, and so was a third brother we brought into Phi Alpha in 1950: Sylvan Goldin, also a graduate of Woodrow Wilson High. Harold was the son of the proprietor of a prestigious restaurant, Parchey's, Albert Mesirow, who wrote a column published in the Washington Post. Sylvan, the son of a D.C. pharmacist, was a popular guy in Jewish high school social circles. And I had many friends in Upsilon Lambda Phi (ULPs), the largest high school level Jewish fraternity in Washington.

We were good athletes, just a bit short of varsity material, and we were friendly with a few Phi Alphans who were prominent in athletics: Charlie Goldberg, with whom I played ball during the time when he was on the varsity basketball team at Roosevelt High School; Ace Adler, starting center on GWU's basketball team; and Gene Witkin, starting guard on the team. Harold, Sylvan, and I "teamed" up with them to attract more athletes, such as GWU junior varsity and varsity basketball players Kenny Kern, Elliott Karver, Joe Masciarelli (the first of our gentile pledges), Bob Edenbaum, Bob Goldstein, and Howie Frushtick; and John Pratt (another gentile), starting lineman on GWU's football team.

Athletes attract young people, and that was an added factor in the ability of Harold, Sylvan, and myself to capture almost the entire next year's pledge group consisting of several dozen young men. Thus, in one year we turned the tables on the TEPs, almost shutting them out completely.

Among the brothers we recruited who helped bring Phi Alpha into prominence were and are: Lenny Weinglass, the famous civil rights lawyer; prominent D.C. physicians such as Herb Kotz, Marvin "Sunny Jim" Rosenblatt (who was a star high school basketball player), and Irwin (Buddy) Shuman; dentist Dick Wolf (another star high school basketball player); and Washington attorneys Ed Statland (president of GWU Phi Alpha when I was its vice president), Willie Applestein (now retired from his practice of law and living in Florida), and Harold Mesirow (one of the foremost admiralty law attorneys in the D.C. area). I would be negligent if I did not mention that we got a lot of help in our recruiting efforts from Charlie Goldberg when he was president of Phi Alpha, and from Bo Kirsch, then a lineman on GWU's football team and now a well known D.C. area attorney.

We became a force on campus through the events we staged and the trophies we won. We were such a force that I cannot imagine how or why GWU Phi Alpha ceased to exist years later, except as to its being joined to ZBT. After I moved to Coconut Creek, Florida in June 2008, I renewed contact with Sylvan Goldin, now a Doctor of Osteopathy practicing out of Plantation, Florida; and he had no more information about the demise than I do. So, I have to leave that part of the history to somebody else.

The New Resurrection

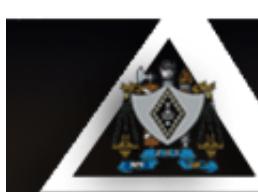

As I wrote this article, Andrew Klein, introducing himself as "President of the Phi Alpha Colony of ZBT" at GWU, was busily recruiting members along with "recruitment chairman" Joshua Brown for the new resurrection of the fraternity I loved so dearly, and soliciting ZBT alumni for help. At the time I wrote this, according to Andrew there were 23 members, and he and his colleagues were aiming for 45, the average-size GWU fraternity, by next semester, so that they could acquire a charter. They appeared to be getting some help from GWU Hillel, which was letting them use its H Street building for get-togethers with alumni.

"We have been very successful in bringing the fraternity back to campus, and we are trying...to hear from our brothers who came before us about their experiences with the fraternity," Andrew told me. "We want to be able to gain a better understanding of our history. Phi Alpha was founded at GWU; so, there is an incredibly rich past that we'd like to connect to. Having our brothers today understand what the alumni gained in their years from Phi Alpha (and in later years ZBT) is incredibly beneficial to continuing the long legacy that you contributed to in your time."

The new resurrection takes place in a different environment from that of the early 1950's, when there was still racial segregation in the neighborhoods and schools. No more. There are professors and students of many races and religions all over the GWU campus. In the early 1950's we could not imagine these developments.

Still, there remain challenges; but given the progress so far of the new Phi Alphans, I am betting on them to meet those challenges. In any event, I am pleased to learn of the new resurrection of the fraternity I loved so much in my college years.

Greek Anti Hazing Hotline

As part of the ongoing effort to end hazing on college campuses and particularly within Greek organizations, Zeta Beta Tau has joined over twenty international fraternities and sororities in a coalition to establish the Greek Anti-Hazing Hotline. The toll-free number is 1-888-NOT-HAZE (1-888-668-4293).

The line is available to those who think they, or students they know, have been or may become victims of hazing. Callers may remain anonymous or provide personal information so their concerns can be responded to directly.

The Anti-Hazing Hotline connects to a dedicated voice mailbox at the Cincinnati law firm of Manley Burke, the publisher of Fraternal Law, a well-known law journal that chronicles legal issues involving collegiate Greek organizations and higher education.

Manley Burke will monitor the anti-hazing hotline on a daily basis and will forward all messages to the appropriate fraternal organization, along with the hazing laws from the relevant jurisdictions. In states in which the law requires notification of other authorities, this will be done. A hazing alert for an organization not involved as a sponsor will be handled as though that organization were a sponsor.

"Fraternities and sororities take hazing very seriously and have worked hard to see that hazing is eliminated," said Tim Burke, president of Manley Burke. "They recognize too many people have been hurt or died as a result of hazing incidents and that today more than 45 states make hazing a crime. Officers of Greek organizations are consistently teaching their members that hazing is antithetical to the high ideals of brotherhood and sisterhood embodied in the fraternity movement," he continued.

Norval Stephens, chairman of the Delta Tau Delta Educational Foundation and former international president of the fraternity, led efforts in establishing the hotline. Stephens worked to grow interfraternal support for the hotline from the time it was conceived in January 2007 through recruitment of sponsors and participating organizations and finally to its implementation.

Stephens explained the goal: "Our experience in the Greek world on hazing and alcohol abuse is that behavior is not changed by research. We believe educational programming and action change behavior. Research illuminates the problem but does not solve it. We hope the hotline helps to eliminate hazing."

Stephens added, "Without exception, all national fraternities and sororities are serious about addressing hazing on the college campus. Many fraternal groups not listed as sponsors already have their own hotlines dedicated to the fight against hazing. We stand with them in our common goal to eliminate these behaviors."

The Anti-Hazing Hotline is a crucial new tool for Greek organizations to use to fight hazing. The 20 founding sponsors, who represent in excess of 35% of all fraternity and sorority members, have invited other fraternities and sororities to join as official sponsors of the Greek Anti-Hazing Hotline.

The Centennial of the North-American Interfraternity Conference: 2009 – 2010

In April, within view of the Pentagon, the Joint Services Color Guard of the Military District of Washington opened the centennial meeting of the North-American Interfraternity Conference House of Delegates. To acknowledge the growth of the fraternal movement, and to recognize that the 73 NIC member fraternities represent both national and international organizations, the executive directors and guests present sang both the Canadian and American national anthems. With the House of Delegates session launched, so was a year-long centennial celebration that will highlight interfraternalism, brotherhood and collaboration.

The National Interfraternity Conference was founded at the University Club of NYC on November 27, 1909 by delegates of 26 fraternities. At the NIC's 75th anniversary, one dinner speaker noted that in 1909, "the climate was such that the country, the fraternities and the people were ready for change." And in the 100 years since fraternities agreed there was value in collaboration, the fraternal movement has indeed changed – the country, the fraternity system, and the people involved with both.

Today there are 127 inter/national fraternities and sororities, and 73 fraternities hold membership in the NIC. In the 100 years since the NIC's founding, two additional important trade organizations have developed, reflecting how the fraternity world and the country have developed. The National Pan-Hellenic Council Inc. represents nine fraternities and sororities with predominantly African-American membership; and the National Association of Latino Fraternal Organizations has a membership base of 23 fraternities and sororities.

The industry continues to evolve with the development and growth of the National Asian Pacific Islander American Panhellenic Association (NAPA) and the National Multicultural Greek Council (NMGC). Combined, the 12,000 fraternity and sorority chapters on more than 800 campuses in the U.S. and Canada have membership of more than nine million, with 750,000 of those being today's undergraduate members and the world's future leaders.

Leadership development is one of many strengths today's fraternity and sorority community offers as the largest and most visible values-based organizations on campus. Without question, fraternities and sororities provide the most successful leadership development programs for college students and provide the largest network of volunteers in the U.S.

How large? Millions of hours of volunteer service are given by fraternity and sorority members annually. Just last year, NIC member fraternities provided more than 1.3 million service hours and raised more than $12.8 million for philanthropy.

But leadership is more than service and philanthropy. Fraternities encourage their development and promote their importance as a foundation for life-long success within the context of being values-based organizations. Many success stories demonstrate how men live their fraternity's values. You can find many of these on www.fraternityinfo.com, the website devoted to telling the fraternity story and celebrating the impact of fraternities on campus, within communities, and on individual lives. Illustrating the point of the speaker at the NIC's 75th anniversary, the men highlighted there have indeed changed the world, the fraternity system and the people involved with both.

The roots of the NIC go back to 1883, to a meeting of fraternity editors in Philadelphia. Ten years later, the "College Fraternities Congress" was held at the Chicago's World Fair; and in 1895, more than 300 fraternity men met in Atlanta to form The American Panhellenic Society. The idea for a permanent society was formalized in 1909, and in the 100 years since the NIC has grown nearly threefold. Throughout the century it has changed to meet the needs of its members and the fraternity world. Today, through advocacy, collaboration, and education the NIC works to ensure that fraternities can operate in an environment conducive to their success. That is the NIC mission.

How does it do that? Through local, regional, and international representation on campuses, in communities, within the fraternity industry, and on Capitol Hill; through public and media relations; web-based initiatives that now include promotion and recruitment assistance through fraternityinfo.com; through position statements that are clear about the values of fraternity men; and through campus intervention and guidance on policies, IFC recognition, colonization, voting, expansion and more.

The NIC's annual recognition and awards program emphasizes the NIC Standards and rewards men, chapters and fraternity members who exemplify them. The awards also encourage fraternities to tell their stories that demonstrate the benefits of fraternalism. The NIC Awards of Distinction celebrate the endeavors and triumphs of those men who "live their ritual" everyday.

The NIC provides extensive programming for IFCs and campus leaders to learn through the IFC Academy and the INTERCHANGE Resource Network. It also provides extensive programming for IFCs and campus leaders to develop their leadership through undergraduate programming that includes the Undergraduate Interfraternity Institute (UIFI), the IMPACT Institute, the Alumni Academy, and the Jon Williamson Futures Quest. In 2010, the NIC will celebrate the 20th Anniversary of UIFI, a program from which over 10,000 fraternity and sorority leaders have graduated since 1990.

The nine-man NIC board of directors planned the year-long celebration that began in April in Washington and will conclude at the NIC's annual meeting in April, 2010. To kick off this 100th year, the leaders of the National Panhellenic Conference, the National Association of Latino Fraternal Organizations, the National Pan-Hellenic Council Inc., and the Association of Fraternity/Sorority Advisors joined the crowd in Washington at the Centennial Banquet to recognize the successes of the fraternity world and to discuss what that work will look like over the next 100 years. The banquet room was filled with a memorabilia exhibit recounting 100 years of the NIC; and reminiscent of a Harry Potter movie, the flag of every member fraternity was hung from the ceiling. NIC Board Chair Bob Marchesani reflected on the history of the organization, but Dud Daniels, who was present at the 50th anniversary celebration, offered many anecdotes from having lived through much of it. Other luminaries from the fraternity world, men whose leadership have put the fraternity movement in the position of strength it is in today, also took the podium and entertained the crowd.

The celebration will continue throughout this year. A Centennial Charter was created and displayed at the annual meeting in Washington, and all 73 members will receive a framed edition. To return to the roots of the NIC, the winter meeting of the board will be held in New York City to coincide with a reception in the University Club where the group will replace the 75th anniversary plaque with one commemorating the centennial. Most importantly, to involve undergraduates in this historic occasion the four Greek regional conferences will present a video shot during the 2009 annual meeting, one involving undergrads, as well as alumni, in telling the story that is interfraternalism.

While the 26 founding member fraternities could not have envisioned videos, websites, and twitter being part of a centennial celebration, certainly they envisioned the interfraternity cooperation that existed then growing into the collaboration that exists today. That collaboration, among 73 international and national men's fraternities, with a focus on advocacy and education for each member, is the mission of today's North-American Interfraternity Conference.

Looking for that dream job and don't know where to start?

Unsure how to prepare for an interview?

Brother Marvin "Marv" L. Recht just might have the answers.

Initiated into the Zeta Chapter of Kappa Nu at the University of Pittsburgh in 1954 (Kappa Nu merged into Phi Epsilon Pi which later merged into Zeta Beta Tau), Brother Recht has established himself as a top specialist in career development. Brother Recht has served as a faculty advisor for several fraternities at Butler University in Indianapolis, IN and has coached young and seasoned professionals in many matters pertaining to finding and getting hired for that dream job.

Brother Recht has joined the official family of Zeta Beta Tau as a volunteer working with academic and career development for our members. Members of ZBT are encouraged to fill out the form with any questions you may have about career development. Questions will be forwarded to Brother Recht for a response.

Richard N. Abrams

Richard "Dick" N. Abrams, Rho (Illinois) '63 has always believed in the value and importance of education. A few years ago he made the commitment of an annual gift to the Zeta Beta Tau Foundation and most recently decided to join the ZBT Foundation Board so he could continue to give back to ZBT. "The Fraternity was instrumental in any success I've had," he says. "It gave me some of the seeds that allowed me to grow."

As a high school senior, Dick had no intention of going to the University of Illinois, but he took a trip to Champaign to visit a high school friend who was a member of ZBT. By the time he returned home, Dick had already decided to enroll at the university and join ZBT.

"ZBT did a lot for me, and I did a lot for ZBT during my time there. I was involved in a lot of campus activities, which was encouraged by ZBT," he recalls. He served as a pledge father; and when the chapter began struggling with recruitment, he stepped in and volunteered to be rush chairman one summer. It was a move, he says, that helped the chapter start to grow again. "ZBT cultivated leadership qualities in me, helped me study and made me more sociable. It helped magnify and expand on what I had already achieved," he shares.

Dick attended law school for a year and a half after graduating from college even though he would have much rather gone straight into the business world. Dick's father was an attorney and after realizing how miserable his son was, he encouraged Dick to quit law school. Dick remembers that Saturday morning like it was yesterday. By Monday he was in the Dean's Office withdrawing from school, and by Tuesday he'd accepted a job at Arthur Young, one of the Big 8 accounting firms (which eventually became Ernst & Young in 1989).

After four years as a tax CPA, Dick went on to become a stock broker and then started his own business in 1970 providing funeral financing to consumers. He stumbled into the business when one of his real estate tenants (a funeral home) was unable to pay the rent one month and the owner offered, instead, to have Dick take over one of his receivables. Before long, Dick's funeral financing business expanded across the country. He now owns several niche companies in the funeral financial business.

In 2000, he began serving as a director for a bank and bank holding company in Fort Worth, Texas, while he was still living in Chicago. After several months, he was asked to step up to become CEO and Chairman of the bank and holding company. He commuted for a year and a half between the two cities until it finally made more sense to permanently move to Texas.

He makes it a priority to give his time and treasure to community needs, serve on non-profit boards and, more recently, provide financial assistance to families through the Jewish Federation in Fort Worth and sponsor student scholarships for mortuary school. He's involved in the Fort Worth Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, the Metropolitan Black Chamber and the Democratic Party. He also donates free caskets to the local police and fire departments for their fallen heroes.

Today, Dick lives full-time in Fort Worth and is married to Julie, a licensed real estate broker and publisher of the Hispanic weekly newspaper in Fort Worth. He has three adult children, who have carried on his entrepreneurial spirit, and a step daughter. He also has four granddaughters and one grandson and can't wait for more!

Zarb Becomes City of Light Trust Member

Michael F. Zarb (Beta Alpha Chi '92) recently stated, "Working to provide the Brotherhood experience [to future brothers] I have had and continue to have is not only a desire but a duty which I take to heart. We all have sworn an oath to help a Brother. It is from this oath that Brotherhood gains strength and endures through time. Through volunteer work and annual donations to the Foundation needs can be addressed as they arise, but what about those that cannot be foreseen. There will come a time in the future where I will no longer be able to answer the call of a Brother. This is the core surrounding my [$100,000] planned gift to the Foundation. The undergraduate Brother or chapter who will require assistance in the future will have a place they can go, educational resources at their disposal, scholarships to help with tuition and most importantly, have a full Brotherhood experience, long after I have gone."

The City of Light Trust recognizes and honors those who have made deferred gifts, whether revocable or irrevocable, to the Zeta Beta Tau Foundation, including but not limited to, trusts, bequests, gifts of life insurance, and annuities. Membership is open to all ZBT alumni, parents, staff, and friends. Members of the City of Light Trust will receive the following benefits.
